

Bernoulli Society European Regional Committee (ERC): Nominations for ERC 2019-2022

According to the statutes of the European Regional Committee (ERC) of the Bernoulli Society, eight of the sixteen members will step down by the end of 2018, and eight new members are to be elected in 2018 to serve on the committee from 2019 to 2022.

The following eight candidates are nominated for election:

Konrad Abramowicz, Umeå University, Sweden
Valérie Chavez, Université de Lausanne, Switzerland
Antoine Chambaz, Université Paris Descartes, France
Leandro Pardo, Universidad Complutense de Madrid, Spain
Sergio Bacallado, University of Cambridge, UK
Zbigniew Szkutnik, AGH University of Science and Technology in Kraków, Poland
Gerda Claeskens, KU Leuven, Belgium
Matúš Maciak, Charles University, Czech Republic

A group of at least five European members of the Bernoulli Society can nominate further candidates. Additional nominations should be sent by email to niels.r.hansen@math.ku.dk, including documentation of the support of the five members and that the nominated candidate is willing to serve on the committee. Additional nominations will force an election among European members of the Bernoulli Society. If no further nominations are received by Friday, December 7, 2018, the eight candidates listed above will be declared elected.
