Call For Papers: SERJ Latin American Special Issue

SERJ co-editor Manfred Borovcnik, along with guest editors Leandro de Oliveira Souza, Mauren Porciúncula, Lucía Zapata-Cardona, and Audy Salcedo, are pleased to announce a call for papers to a special issue of SERJ, Statistics Education Research Journal, titled "Statistics Education Research from a Latin American Perspective." Papers will reflect the plurality of epistemological and methodological approaches conducted in Latin American communities. A main goal of the special issue is to highlight the specific paradigm of the Latin approach as compared to international research. Authors are encouraged to highlight distinctive Latin American features, such as methods, cultural features, curricular considerations, or professional development.

Initial manuscripts, with a maximum of 6000 words of body text, can be submitted in English, Portuguese, or Spanish. The initial version will be read by referees in the language submitted. If a contribution is accepted, it must be translated into English by the authors and submitted in both languages.

Interested authors may get a document with a more detailed synopsis of the topic from Leandro de Oliveira Souza, to whom all communications and submissions are to be sent: olilean@gmail.com. Expressions of intent, with a 150 to 250 word abstract, should be submitted by 30 June. Initial manuscripts will be due on 30 August.
